When Senator Foraker was a boy he used to pick geese. He takes a pluck occasionally at Hanna now and finds him a pretty tough one.

Hon. Mark Hanna has been bossing the Republican party, but Senator Jones, of Nevada, has taken that job off his hands for the present, until it gets through with that little tariff business.

For some time they have been painting houses in England with an apparatus that dispenses with the brush and puts on the paint in a spray from a nozzle, the force used being compressed air. The idea has been caught in th s country, where something similar has been introduced. It is said to do the work more quickly and much more cheaply than it could be done in the old way, while it easily reaches narrow places, corners, cornices, &c., which it is troublesome to paint with the brush.

Kansas has some thrifty hustlers. In the town of Wauneta the doctor, drug store man and magistrate are consolidated in one man. As a druggist he sells the boys sperits, and when they get hilarious he fines them as a magistrate. There are five voters in the town and he had three of them up before him the other day.

Senator Gorman expresses the opinion that the new tariff will get through by the 1st of July. After they get it in the best shape they can the sooner they put it through the better. If it is good, all right, the sooner it will produce fruit; if it is bad, the sooner the people will get sick of it.

The negroes in Washington and the District of Columbia have a grievance. They say the President is drawing the color line and appointing from the colored race only mulattoes, quadroons and octaroons to office. They think this figuring in fractions not the square thing.

A Syracuse (N. Y) man has sued his father-in-law for $100,000 damages for alienating the affections of his wife. His wife can't complain at the valuation he put upon her affections, if he did have another living wife, as her father alleged.

The New York Sun calls the anti-trust and inheritance tax laws of New York "anti-thrift" laws. The Sun, which is now with Mark Hanna, shines for the trust, but it still poses as a Democratic paper.

A Chicago man who has a record of having smoked 150,000 cigars, is dying of starvation, resulting from cancer of the throat, caused by excessive smoking. For more than forty years he smoked from ten to fifteen cigars a day.

This year is the centenary of the meerschaum pipe. But notwithstanding its age it is a mere sham yet. As a thoroughly satisfying smoker it can't hold a candle to the unsophisticated cob pipe or the Sally Dillard clay.

Excursion From Newbern.

The excursion from Newbern will bring a large crowd of people to-day. It is thought that as many as two hundred will come. The W., N. & N. Railroad has arranged a programme by which the visitors can reach here by 11 o'clock in the morning and get back at 11 o'clock at night. There will be a number of wheelmen along and these, or some of them, will probably get off at the railroad crossing, where they will be met by some of the Wilmington 'cyclists and accompanied to the beach.

In this connection it has been asked if the Oakland 'Cycle Club accepted the challenge of the Carolina Club to engage in a competitive relay race. The challenge was sent several weeks ago but if it has accepted nobody here knows anything about it. Success to our friends from Newbern.

Handsome Tapestry Painting.

There is a very handsome piece of tapestry on exhibition at Gerken's Emporium. It is entitled "Surprise" and was painted by Mrs. M. B. Weathers, of Rocky Point.

Now that all the works of art in the State are being sent to be placed on exhibition at the Woman's Exposition of the Carolina's at Charlotte, it would not be a bad idea for this piece of work to be displayed there also.

Convenience to Visitors.

A handsome new sign above the wharf of the steamer Wilmington bears the reading "Southport and Carolina Beach Steamboat Line." This will be of great convenience to visitors.

The visiting "brethren" who went out on the Wilmington Monday and Tuesday were greatly pleased with the trip, though some of them felt a touch of sea-sickness.

The Quakers are now pushing the Colonels hard for second place, and should they defeat them in to-day's game they will gain it.

St. Louis is now gallantly defending the rear, a position she will no doubt relinquish at the first opportunity. The Quakers defeating her in two games yesterday proved disastrous.

Maul's arm gave out yesterday while pitching for the Senators, and it is probable that he will now retire from the box.

New York seems destined not to have a chance, at any rate soon, of paying Louisville back for the drubbing she received Monday.

TAMMANY DAY

Celebrated by the Braves of Eyota and Cherokee Tribes Improved Order of Red Men.

"Tammany Day" was celebrated last night by Eyota and Cherokee Tribes of Improved Order of Red Men. A large number of braves from both tribes were present and made the pale faces, who were adopted, tremble as they joined in the war dance. Afterwards refreshments were served, while the "big injuns" proceeded to have a good time generally. During the evening speeches, appropriate to the occasion, were made by Aldermen W. H. Northrop, Jr., Capt. Jas. M. McGowan and others.

The committee of arrangements, who are responsible for the enjoyable time, consisted of Capt. Jas. M. McGowan and Messrs. E. R Wooten and Geo. Sloan, of Eyota, and Messrs. W. H. Lane, A. B. Shiver and H. A. Parker, of Cherokee. With all the merry-making the STAR was not forgotten, but was the recipient of a waiter ladened with a portion of the feast, and the night force "didn't do a thing to it."

Laid at Rest.

Fayetteville Observer, May 12: Nothing could testify more to the esteem in which Capt. W. C. McDuffie was held than the great concourse of people who assembled yesterday to pay their last tribute to his memory, and the sincere sorrow every one seemed to feel at his loss. Seldom has one seen so many or as beautiful floral tributes as were laid upon his grave. The services at St. John's Episcopal church were conducted by Rev. Isaac Hughes, assisted by Rev. J. N. Starr.

His comrades in life, the Independent Company, the Knights of Pythias, numerous carriages and hundreds of people on foot escorted the remains to their last resting place.

Following is the list of pall bearers: Dr. J. Vance McGougan, Archie Sykes, Dr. J. H. Marsh, Best; R. Huske, S. H. MacRae, H. McD. Robinson, Hector McGeachy, John Underwood; honorary, N. B. Alexander, B. R. Taylor, H. R. Hall, R. G. Haigh.

AMPLE PROVISION.

[North Carolina Baptist]

If in the mind of any native of the State or foreigner there was any doubt as to the ability of Wilmington to entertain the Convention, that doubt was entirely removed the first day of this great meeting. Handsomely were the numerous messengers cared for and everybody seemed delighted. Pastor Oliver and his efficient co-workers deserve great credit and sincere gratitude for the ample provision made for this occasion.

Mr. Brandt was a brave soldier of the Confederate army, having been a member of Company F, First Regiment N. C. Troops.

— Mr. B. W. Townsend, of Red Springs, and Mr. L. G. Blaw, of New York, are in the city on a business visit.

ON THE WRONG TACK.

Everybody is anxious to see prosperity come to the country, and no one more, perhaps, than the politicians who promised it and feel that their hold on power depends on the realization of those promises. They either believe or think they believe that prosperity can be brought by an increase of tariff duties, to encourage manufacturers to make more goods for people who can't buy what they make now. The aim of a protective tariff is to make the home market the market for the manufacturer and practically speaking the only market because with the assurance he has of higher prices and better profits in the home market than in other markets he will work for that and neglect the others, in which he could not compete any way with foreign manufacturers while he has to pay duty on the raw materials he consumes. But if he could compete the protective tariff being in its essence prohibitory tends to close not only to the manufacturer but to the farmer and other producers foreign markets, because the people of other countries deal where they can deal to the best advantage, buy most from the people who buy most from them and with whom they can exchange profitably their commodities for such things as they need and can turn into profit. The English manufacturer, for instance, ships his cargo of agricultural implements, other kinds of hardware and other goods to Argentina and takes his pay in wheat, for which there is a good market in his own country. He exchanges his cargo at the English price for the wheat at Argentine prices and makes a profit on that because he has no tariff to pay on it when it goes into an English port, so he makes two profits one on the cargo which he sends out and another on the cargo which he brings back.

How is it with the American manufacturer? He ships a cargo of the same articles which the Englishman ships but he must have cash; he can't exchange it for wheat or any other product of that country which is taxed on entering an American port, for that would take the profit off. This is the reason why our manufacturers have cut such a small figure in foreign markets, why they have never made any serious attempt to push their goods in foreign markets, and why they have depended mainly upon the home market, from which the foreign competition was practically debarred.

The Wilson tariff was an improvement in this respect, took a wiser view of the needs of our manufacturers, lowered many of the duties on imports and put certain raw materials on the free list so that our manufacturers would stand on the same footing, as far as these were concerned, with their foreign competitors, and the result was that our manufacturers exported more of their goods since that tariff became operative than they ever did before within the same time, thus verifying the predictions and vindicating the wisdom of the Democrats who insisted on a reduction of tariff duties and in putting certain largely used raw materials on the free list, both of which policies are to be reversed by the new tariff framers, who assert that this is the way to restore prosperity, in the face of its failure for years and the success of the opposite policy.

But how is the manufacturer to prosper unless the farmer prospers? How can the farmer prosper when very little of what he produces brings the cost of production and very much of it less than that? At least one half the population of the United States are dependent upon the labor done upon the farm. Nearly every merchant is dependent more or less upon it. The railroads with the three millions of people dependent upon them are dependent upon it. The boats that carry cargoes upon the lakes and rivers are dependent upon it. The wagon manufacturers, and the manufacturers of agricultural machinery and implements are dependent upon it, and there are others dependent upon all of these, so that it may be safely said that nearly all the people of the country are dependent directly or indirectly upon the farm and can only prosper as the farmer prospers. There is no agrarianism or pandering to the farmer in this, it is simply a cold-blooded statement of fact justified by experience and observation and based on common sense.

Let wheat go to a dollar a bushel and see how the railroad men hustle, and note how cheerfully and confidently they talk. Let wheat and other farm products go up and keep going up, and note how soon the manufactories which were closed start up and how the wheels in the others hum with increased activity. Isn't this an eloquent admission of the dependence of both on the farm? As it is with those, so it is with scores of other industries and other callings.

If the cotton planters and the farmers had in hand last year's crop of cotton, grain and other products, and cotton went to ten cents a pound, wheat to a dollar a bushel, corn, oats and everything else in proportion and continued, then we would have prosperity inside of ninety days, and so much of it that it would keep us hustling to keep up with it.

But how are these increases in prices to come? That's the question. There is no special foreign demand for any of our farm products, and there isn't a very active demand at home, because in the depressed condition of business and the poor rewards of labor for those who have employment the people are too poor to buy liberally, and many of them find it about all they can do to buy what they need even at present prices. Increasing tariff duties is not going to increase the price of farm products, or improve the general condition much, if any. There is one way in which that can be done, only one, and that is by increasing the volume of money and making what the sticklers for gold and scarce money call "cheap money," "cheap" not because it is bad, but because it is abundant. There are two ways by which this can be done One is by the free and unlimited coinage of silver, the other State banks, either of which would be good, both of which would be better. Thus the country would be supplied with all the money it needed; and that longed-for, promised prosperity would come right along.

MINOR MENTION.

Within the ten years ending June 30th, 1896, this country exported $156,486,325 in gold more than it imported. In other words we added that much to the stock of gold in Europe; sent out that much gold which never came back. If we had not continued to coin to fill up the vacuum, how long would it be before we were cleaned out of gold entirely? Within that time there has been coined $400,000,000 in gold, so that notwithstanding the exports we are better supplied with gold than we were ten years ago. So much for the free and unlimited coinage of gold. But there is an object lesson in this. The excess of exports over imports for a period of ten years shows that there is a continuous draw upon the gold resources of this country, not a spasmodic movement, but a continuous one. This is one of the few gold-producing countries to which the European Governments look for part of the supply to keep up their hoards. They draw on us at the rate of something over $15,000,000 a year. Hasn't this a tendency to keep gold scarce with us and to make it more difficult to get to discharge obligations payable in gold? And yet there are so-called financiers who persist in clinging to the gold standard and leaving us at the mercy of foreigners, who every year draw millions from us and thus diminish the volume of the money they expect us to pay to them if we owe them anything. Every dollar they take from us which does not return in the course of trade makes it just that much the more difficult for us to meet obligations in that coin.

A good many air ships are seen these days, or rather nights (by the way, it is remarkable that they are never seen in the daytime), or the air ship is seen in many different places, sometimes almost simultaneously, and still there are a good many people skeptical about them, and a good many who positively refuse to believe that there is any such thing as an air ship or that an air ship is a possibility. When Thomas Jefferson was in France in one of his letters he described some experiments which he had seen with an air ship. That was about 1789. But the first authentic, historic account of a sure-enough air ship ante-dates the Paris' venture by over a hundred years, and is a genuine Yankee invention. We clip from an exchange which quotes from a history of Connecticut which was published in England in 1781:

"About 1646 people of New Haven fitted out a ship and sent her richly laden to England to procure a patent for the colony and a charter for the city. After the ship had been at sea some weeks there happened in New England a violent storm, which induced the people of New Haven to fast and pray and inquire of the Lord whether their ship was in that storm. This was a real fast, for the people neither ate nor drank from sunrise to sunset.

"At 5 o'clock in the afternoon they came out of meeting, walking softly and sadly homeward. On a sudden the air thundered, and the lightnings shone abroad. They looked up toward the heavens, when they beheld their ship under full sail, and the sailors steering her from west to east. She came over to the meeting where they had fasted and prayed, and then was met by a eurocydon, which rent the sails and overset the ship; in a few moments she fell down near the weathercock on the steeple, and instantly vanished. The people all returned to the meeting, where the minister gave thanks to God for answering the desires of his servants, and for giving them an infallible token of the loss of their ship and charter."

After reading this sober account of this air-ship which met with such a disastrous fate (which may have had a discouraging effect on launching any more of them), the skeptic will see that the air ship isn't such a new thing after all.

Chairman Dingley doesn't like the manipulation of his tariff bill by the Senate Committee and insists that, eliminating the revenue that is expected from the increase of the tax on beer, tea and tobacco, the proposed Senate bill, or, as Mr. Dingley calls it, the revised House bill, will not produce as much revenue as his bill would. Very likely this is so, and the Senate Committee might possibly take the same view of it and give as a reason for the changes that they didn't deem it wise to practice any more extortion on the people than was necessary under the circumstances for the benefit of the protected interests, which are pretty well recognized even in the modified schedules. But isn't it a practical confession that there was no necessity for these increased impost duwhen the Senate turned to beer, tea and tobacco to get the bulk of the revenue needed? And when it is further considered that they claim they will get about $90,000,000 out of sugar, the question might be asked why do they pile the taxes on other things, when sugar, beer, tea and tobacco will give them all the revenue they need, as the tariff rates now run, and leave a large surplus over? The only way to account for this is that the increase of duties is simply a sop to the gentlemen who contributed to Mark Hanna's campaign fund.

—— The gold bugs are getting their arguments confused. THE GHOST WALKS FOR WILLIAM.

A Considerable Procession When the Kaiser's Salary Is Taken to Him.

Emperor William receives his salary quarterly in advance. The money is thrice counted by different functionaries at the national treasury and is afterward placed in a number of strong boxes and carried to the royal mail wagon waiting at the door between a troop of mounted gendarmes. After the load has been placed in the vehicle the ministers of finance of the empire and of the kingdom place the seals of their respective offices upon the door and accompany the minister of the royal household in his carriage to the palace, the mail wagon with its escort of gendarmes following immediately behind. Not until the money is actually deposited in the vaults of Emperor William's Berlin palace does the minister of the household sign the receipts, which are made out in the name of "Wilhelm Rex" and "William Imperator" respectively, one-half of the sum being derived from the treasury of the kingdom of Prussia and the other from the treasury of the German empire.

Two days afterward the court functionaries receive their pay, but although the emperor receives his salary in advance not one of the employees is similarly favored, so that the emperor is practically always three months behind in the pay list of his household. The only exception which the emperor makes is in favor of his consort, whose personal allowance of $250,000 per annum is paid to her quarterly in advance.

At no great court in Europe are the salaries so low as at that of Berlin, the so called great dignitaries having to satisfy themselves with a pittance of $2,000 a year, while the minister himself receives but $3,000. This is not surprising when the enormous number of persons who figure on the payroll is taken into consideration. For instance, there are no less than 500 housemaids and 1,800 liveried footmen. Every servant, high or low, is entitled to a pension after working in the royal household for 20 years.

Over and beyond the civil list received by the emperor from the treasury of the empire and that of the kingdom he draws from the war department full salaries for the different military commands he assumes. As commander in chief of the army he is continually appointing himself colonel in chief of this or that regiment, which has thereupon the right to style itself the "leib" or body regiment of his majesty. Whenever one reads in the gazette that he has thus honored a regiment in the army, one may take it for granted that it entails an addition to his income in the shape of a colonel's pay and allowances. Inasmuch as at the present moment he holds the colonelcy of some 50 different regiments, it will readily be seen that this constitutes no inconsiderable addition to his income, all the more as the colonelcies carry with them forage allowances for about 200 horses.

Out of this civil list the emperor is expected to pay the allowances of the various members of his family. But this is not a heavy drain on his purse. His brother, Prince Henry, and his brother-in-law, Prince Frederick Leopold, have each inherited immense private fortunes and are practically independent of any allowance, while the only other princes of his house, Prince Albert of Brunswick, the crazy Prince Alexander and the eccentric yet talented Prince George, all three elderly men, are exceedingly wealthy. Indeed, they figure among the richest princes of the blood in Europe.—Chicago Record.

A STOLEN PIE.

John Driscoll had not tasted food for 48 hours. He was absolutely penniless. As he walked up Fifth avenue, clad in a fashionable suit of clothes, with a shiny silk hat on his head, few people could suspect that he was suffering for want of food.

He pursued his course up Fifth avenue and finally reached Central park.

Weak and faint, but still maintaining an indifferent mien, he entered the park. He strolled along its shady lanes, pausing at some water fountain to quench his thirst.

He sat down at intervals and rested his weak limbs, but the act of sitting seemed to remind him more of his hunger.

It is a hard trial for a young, vigorous and healthy man to go for any great length of time without food, and especially so in a rich, populous city. If he had been dressed in rags, he would have begged, but it was utterly impossible for him to do that with his present appearance.

After awhile he found himself in a very secluded part of the park. He seated himself on a bench by the lake. The birds were gayly singing overhead, there was a fragrant scent of flowers in the air, the waters were rippling and sparkling, and the swans and ducks were disporting themselves on the breast of the lake. The sounds of childish laughter and merry shouts were wafted to his ears. He felt moody and despondent; he wished he were a swan or duck, or bird—in fact, anything but a human being. He cursed fate; he cursed everything. "My God," he thought, "how I would like a morsel of food!" He felt like committing a robbery, a murder, any crime at all, only something that would bring him food.

A light footstep near him aroused him from his reverie. There before him stood a fat, chubby, rosy cheeked little child, gazing at him with wide, staring eyes. In his plump little hands he held a large homemade pie.

Driscoll started up. The sight of that pie was most tantalizing in its effect upon him. How he would like to eat it!

There was no one in the immediate vicinity, no one to observe him. The child was fat and well fed, and he (Driscoll) was starving.

He arose and approached the child. "My little man," said he, smiling as graciously as he was possible for him to do, "come here."

"What have you there, my dear?" said Driscoll, "pie!"

"Eth, thir," lisped the little one.

"Let me see it, baby," he said, but the little one shook his head and held the pie behind his back.

"Come," said Driscoll, "won't baby let me see its pie?"

The child gravely gave a negative shake of the head.

"Please let uncle see it," said Driscoll coaxingly and at the same time making an effort to take it.

"No, no; me 'ants it," said baby.

"Let me have it," said Driscoll impatiently.

The little one made a movement as though to run away.

Tired of importuning the baby and fearful lest its mother or nurse should appear and spoil his opportunity, he suddenly bent his face close to that of the child. Assuming the most diabolical and forbidding expression it was possible for him to do, he hissed out, "Give me that pie; give me that pie quick, or I'll murder and eat you, quick!"

The child gave a terrified scream, let the pie drop at Driscoll's feet and scampered down a side path as rapidly as his short little legs could travel. Driscoll quickly picked the pie up, held it in one hand, which he placed in the breast of his coat, and sauntered nonchalantly away. In a few moments he heard in the rear of him the little child: "There he goes nussey; there he goes, nussey. He got my pie."

"Nonsense, child," said a female voice, "that gentleman did not take it. It was some one else."

The child persisted in his statement, but the nurse refused to believe it, and meanwhile Driscoll had passed beyond hearing.

He wanted to find some quiet spot where, unmolested, he could eat his stolen pie, but everywhere he went he found one or more persons. At length he reached a very secluded out of the way corner, and, sitting himself on the grass, drew forth his precious pie.

The ridiculousness of the thing now struck him, and he burst into a hearty peal of laughter. He held the pie at arm's length and looked at it. He was just about to place it to his mouth; but, alas and alack, "there is many a slip 'twixt cup and lip!" A great, large Newfoundland dog at this juncture jumped from a clump of bushes, snatched the pie from his hands and bounded swiftly away.

Poor Driscoll! All the merriment fled from his heart at once. His pie was gone. I am afraid he gave vent to his feelings in rather more profane language than it would be well to record here.

"Fate is against me," he sadly muttered as he arose to his feet and walked away.

"My God," he thought, "have I got to starve to death surrounded by plenty? It is pretty hard. Well, I will hold up as long as I have strength, only it is a hard death."

When he turned out of the park, it was well along in the afternoon. He wandered aimlessly along the streets, scarcely knowing in which direction he was going.

As he passed a certain house he heard a childish voice in his rear exclaim, "Papa, papa, there is the man that took my pie!"

Turning, he beheld the identical little child whose pie he had taken clinging to the hand of a gentleman, evidently just returning from business.

The gentleman's face seemed familiar, and no sooner had he scanned Driscoll's countenance than he cried out, "John Driscoll, how are you?" and at the same time held out his hand for the other to take. This Driscoll did, and as remembrances came to his brain he recollected an old college chum and a warm friend. "Charley Vaughn," he cried, "I am delighted to see you."

It was a particularly happy meeting for Driscoll. After some conversation Vaughn invited him in, and ere long Driscoll related the whole story of the pie over a glass of wine. Vaughn was immensely amused.

He insisted upon Driscoll remaining with him until certain remittances arrived and loaned him a sum of money to tide him over his present difficulties.

As Driscoll remarked, however, it was a fortunate and opportune theft for him to rob Vaughn's child of the pie.—Edward B. Hunt in Cincinnati Post.

The Wrong Girl.

"There is such a lovely story in this week's Companion about a man proposing to the wrong girl," said the young lady boarder.

"Any girl is the wrong girl for a man to propose to," growled the bachelor, but no one paid any attention to him. It was just what they expected.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Prescription.

The young woman who takes music lessons and practices scales had announced to her friends that she was going away.

"Isn't it rather a sudden determination?"

"Yes. It's the doctor's orders."

"Why, you don't look the least bit ill."

"Oh, I'm perfectly well. Auntie is the one who is sick."—Washington Star.

Patents In England.

The British government makes no examination to determine the validity of a device for which a patent is asked, but takes it for granted that every invention is new and grants a patent to every applicant, leaving his claim, if contested, to be subsequently determined by the courts.

Something to Depend On.

Mr. James Jones, of the firm of Jones & Son, Cowden, Ill., in speaking of Dr. King's New Discovery, says that last winter his wife was attacked with La Grippe, and her case grew so serious that physicians at Cowden and Pana could do nothing for her. It seemed to develop into Hasty Consumption. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in store, and selling lots of it, he took a bottle home, and to the surprise of all she began to get better from the first dose, and half-dozen dollar bottles cured her sound and well. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is guaranteed to do this good work. Try it. Free trial bottles at R. R. BELLAMY'S Drug Store. †

COTTON MARKETS.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, May 12.—The cotton market showed considerable irregularity to day, selling off in the afternoon but rallying partially later in the session, with the market finally steady at a net decline of 1@5 points. The early weakness in cotton was due primarily to very disappointing cables from Liverpool in view of the advance that took place in our market yesterday afternoon. At the same time crop accounts, while more or less conflicting, had a bearish average during the forenoon. Later in the session there was some rally on less favorable weather predictions, pointing to indications of showers all over the cotton belt within the next twenty-four hours. Much of the time June and July contracts held a firm relation to the general market, owing to continued interest shown by American spinners and exporters in spot cotton. During the afternoon buying on Southern orders was a feature, while room traders met the demand without hesitation. At the weakest interval the market to-day showed a net loss of 4@7 points.

NEW YORK, May 12—Evening.—Cotton steady; middling 7¾c.

Cotton futures closed steady; sales 87,500 bales; January 6 89, February 6 93, March 6 97, May 7 41, June 7 43, July 7 45, August 7 39, September 7 05, October 6 83, November 6 89, December 6 85.

1897 MODEL

BICYCLE.

Your Choice of Any of the Highest Grade $100.00 Bicycles, 1897 Model, Free of Cost by Using Some of Your Spare Moments.

The great strides made by THE NEW YORK TIMES within the last few months form a notable chapter in American journalism. During a period of general business depression THE NEW YORK TIMES has made steady progress, having within six months nearly double its circulation. This growth, while indeed gratifying, serves only to stimulate the management to greater efforts. With a view to the introduction of THE NEW YORK TIMES in homes where it is not now received, where the improvement that has been made may not be known, a plan has been devised to reward those who assist in the work of increasing its circulation by offering to any man, woman, or child any one of the standard high-grade one hundred-dollar Bicycles, 1897 model, if they will secure one hundred (100) new subscribers for THE NEW YORK TIMES each for three months—$3 if delivered by carrier $3.50 if sent by mail. That no effort to increase the circulation of THE NEW YORK TIMES may go unrewarded to those who find they cannot secure more than fifty subscribers for three months each, the choice will be given of any fifty-dollar (retail price) bicycle, American manufacture, and to those who in their efforts fall short of fifty subscribers there will be paid 50 cents in cash for every subscriber less than fifty.

Remember you can have your Choice of any Bicycle of American Manufacture.

THE OFFER IN DETAIL.

Any person desiring to undertake the work of securing 100 subscribers should notify THE NEW YORK TIMES, and full instructions and blanks will be furnished. Under no circumstances will a subscription be accepted as making up the number required of any person who has been a regular reader of THE NEW YORK TIMES since JAN. 1, 1897. All lists will be investigated, and if it is found that they include the name of any person who has recently been a regular reader, that subscription will not be accepted to make up the list of 100.

It is distinctly understood that all lists of names are subject to verification. All copies of THE NEW YORK TIMES ordered under this plan must be delivered where THE TIMES has not heretofore been received. The offer is intended solely for new subscriptions, and orders from present regular readers of THE NEW YORK TIMES will, under no circumstances, be accepted in making up the required number.

Orders for the delivery of two copies to the same address will not be accepted as two new subscribers. The purpose of THE TIMES is to obtain a wider distribution of its issues in homes where it has not heretofore been delivered.

PLAN OF WORK.

Make up a list of your relatives, friends and acquaintances, only those to whom you are well known. Give their full name and Post Office addresses. When you have the number, write or send to THE NEW YORK TIMES office for that number of letter circulars and subscription blanks. Address and sign the letter circulars inclosing addressed envelope for reply, (THE NEW YORK TIMES will supply them.) Send the signed and addressed letter circulars to THE NEW YORK TIMES, and they will be mailed without cost to you; if you mail them yourself you must affix to each letter a two-cent stamp. By this means you may, without calling in person on your friends, earn your choice of any one-hundred-dollar bicycle.

It is necessary, of course, in order to successfully participate in this work, to have an adequate conception of what kind of a newspaper THE NEW YORK TIMES is. If you are not a reader of THE TIMES, secure a copy, read it carefully, and thus become acquainted with its merits. You will see that THE NEW TIMES is a decent, dignified, enterprising, first-class newspaper. It has always maintained a high standard; it has always stood for what is best in the community; it is not sensational; perpetrates no fakes, and is free of "fads;" it presents what occurs promptly, fully, and in a manner to interest intelligent men and women. To be seen reading THE NEW YORK TIMES is a stamp of culture and respectability. The story is told of a young man who, when applying for a situation, and asked for reference by his prospective employer, answered simply, "I read THE NEW YORK TIMES." He was accepted in the employment at once on the theory that reading a newspaper of the quality of THE NEW YORK TIMES is a certificate of good character.

A FEW FACTS.

A large part of the population of Greater New York consists of men and women of culture and education who scrupulously exclude from their homes sensational newspapers. They want a pure, wholesome newspaper, which, while progressive and entertaining does not defile its pages by repulsive details of scandals and horrible accounts of crime. There is a growing revolt against those newspapers which pander to the depraved, and which inflame the minds of the weak-minded and unthinking by overdrawn tales of vice and immorality. The best men in the community are calling halt on this vicious tendency, and THE NEW YORK TIMES is daily pointed to as an example of what a self-respecting, modern newspaper should be. Secure a copy of the Saturday edition and observe the Supplement, devoted to a review of books and art. Show this to your friends who are readers of the best literature, and they will be interested at once in the attractive contents of this feature. The Illustrated Magazine Supplement which accompanies the Sunday edition is a gem of art and literature. It compares favorably with the best ten-cent magazines. A knowledge of these facts will enable you to properly present the merits of THE NEW YORK TIMES to prospective subscribers.

Things worth having are not easily obtained. It requires earnest effort and untiring persistence to secure 100 subscribers and you may find for the first day or two that the effort is not so easy as you may imagine, but perseverance will surely bring success.

If you desire additional information, write to THE TIMES. All questions will be cheerfully answered. This is a rare opportunity to secure your choice of any of the best one-hundred-dollar bicycles. Sample copies of THE TIMES sent free upon application. Address THE NEW YORK TIMES, New York City.

LINES TO A BLOTTING PAD.

Thou kindly porous plaster for the ills
Occasioned by the ink a poet spills,
Absorb unto thyself his many faults
And sponge his verse where rhyme or rhythm halts!
Yet lest perchance thy too retentive touch
Appropriate in pa ing overmuch,
Pray leave a trace of what he would imply
Were thought but free and ink allowed to dry,
In former times they sprinkled out the sand
To sweep it off and let the writing stand,
While nowadays a line is hardly writ
Ere we regret and seek to alter it
And spend in emendation so much pains
That scarce an inkling of the truth remains.
So for the nonce let my poor pen run free
And leave recorded whatso'er it be.
Grant it expansio a for a final line,
And all that went before is gladly thine.
Then will this postscript yet suffice to show,
"I'll love sweet Alice long as ink shall flow."

PRECEDENCE IN ENGLAND.

The Red Tape That Rules the Position of Women at Table.

To Americans the great question of precedence at formal English dinners presents a humorous aspect, but to our transatlantic cousins it is deeply serious. Many an English girl thinks it worth while to be miserable all her life if she may lead the way to the festal board. Here is the table of rank in its proper order, which she must have engraved upon the fleshy tablets of her heart, complicated, moreover, with exact knowledge as to which of two baronets or earls is of the earlier "creation." It is recommended to the devout study of future American countesses or duchesses:

Is Burglary a Science?

The modern burglar is a scientist and inventor in his way. Recently a new era in safe breaking and other branches of the cracksman's art has opened, and the famous jimmy, so long rampant on the successful burglar's coat of arms, is to be superseded by more convenient labor saving tools.

In Marseilles the other day a gang of ingenious cracksmen entered a banker's office armed with a steel saw of the newest construction and a handy little gas engine. There was no need for the exercise of muscle, nor was there any necessity for a good strong wrist at the saw, as there was at one time in the annals of famous robberies.

The little engine was started, the saw put in the proper place and the connections made. Seating themselves serenely upon a couple of chairs near at hand, these modern burglars watched the true and rapid work of their appliances.

The big safe might have resisted for hours the force of human hands, but the saw, impelled by the engine, it could not stand against. The stout iron safe promptly yielded up its contents of over £800 worth of gold and bonds, and in a quarter of the time it would have taken to have committed the robbery under the old conditions the burglars were well out of the building with their booty.—Pearson's Weekly.

Horses and Roads.

On metal rails, in the most favorable condition and smooth from use, a horse can draw 1¾ times as much as on the best asphalt pavement, 8¾ times as much as on good Belgian blocks, 5 times as much as on ordinary Belgian blocks, 7 times as much as on good cobblestone, 18 times as much as on ordinary cobblestone, 20 times as much as on an earth road and 40 times as much as on sand.

Brown sugar, according to its degree of dampness, will weigh from a pound to a pound and a quarter. When dry, its weight is almost exactly a pound.

SLEEPING WITH BABY

WHEN DOING SO MOTHERS MUST BE CAREFUL IN BREATHING.

Air That Has Passed Through the Lungs Is Full of Impure Gases and Poisonous Waste Substances—How Must Little Babies Be Kissed by Any One.

What is that everybody wants, says the conundrum, everybody asks for, everybody gives and nobody takes? And the answer is, Advice. But there is one class to whom this does not apply, and that is the noble army of mothers. They want advice, they ask for it, and they take it gladly. What shall we do for the children? How shall we best care for the babies? These are the great questions and near to every true woman's heart.

To keep the baby well and strong perhaps the great essential is calm and deep sleep. If the little one rests well at night, its chances of health are always good.

The books say: Give the baby a cool bath and put it to sleep by itself. Never let a little child remain in bed at night with another person, not even its mother. That is what the books say, books written by men who know a good deal about babies, but not everything. Some of us have never been able to believe that this is quite right. The human mother is the only animal that puts its young away from it during the hours of darkness. Little chickens sleep under their mother's wing. The cat and her kittens resolve themselves into a furry mass for their night's rest, and all the animals of the forest are equally tender and near to their offspring. It must be remembered, however, that our humble cousins, the cat, the hen, the lioness, etc., are very sensible mothers, and that by considering their ways we, too, may become wise and learn how and why we should have our little ones near us at night.

In the first place, great care must be taken to secure air that is pure for the baby to breathe. It must not be contaminated in any way, not even by the mother's breath. Air that has been drawn into the lungs and forced out again is full of poison. Not only does it contain impure gases—as carbonic acid gas—but a pernicious waste substance similar in quality to snake poison. Sufficient quantities of these noxious materials will cause death, as in the Black Hole of Calcutta, or the crowded Scandinavian ballroom where merrymakers danced in a low, unventilated space till they fell fainting and dying, their revels and their life ending at the same time. These are extreme cases, yet unseen poison lurks in the breath of every one—poison in minute quantities.

So let the mother turn her face away, keeping the baby within range of her comforting maternal hand, but out of reach of all waves of exhaled air from her own lungs. A good place for a small infant at night is on a hair pillow a little above the level of the mother's head, or perhaps down toward the foot of the bed.

An enterprising woman whose family was large and house small contrived an ingenious method of raising the baby above the poison level. A clothesbasket about three feet long was fitted up with hair mattress and appropriate furnishings and suspended from the ceiling at the spot most accessible to the mother at night, midway between the middle and foot of the bed, and drawn up and down by pulleys as occasion required. This fulfilled every condition of health and economy of space. Impure air, when first exhaled from the lungs, rises, because it is warm, and when cooled falls to the lower part of the room. The most poisonous region, then, is toward the floor. In giving some good advice concerning the breath of life, —which is pure air—Charles Kingsley says in substance, in speaking of the very poor of England; "Dissuade them from selling their beds under the stress of poverty. Let them sell the mattress if they will, but not the bedstead that holds them up above the polluted atmosphere near the floor."

Thus it will be perceived that the old fashioned trundle bed, though convenient, is not without danger. A baby will sleep peacefully in a crib close to its mother's bed when it will toss with restless cries in some distant part of the room. Children are but fractions of their parents, and if ever they are to become whole numbers they need all the spiritual aids that loving contact and the brooding presence of the mother can give.

Aside from the normal poisons that exist in air breathed out from the lungs others may go with it that are especially injurious to the sensitive lining of the nose, eye and mouth—to what is called the mucous membrane. Little invisible particles may thus be absorbed by a sleeping infant and its own mother become a source of danger. Imperfect teeth, inferior digestion, catarrhal conditions of the air passages, and various infectious disorders destroy the purity of the breath and render it full of possible disaster to the highly sensitive, of whom infants are the chief. It is common to say that certain things are not contagious, and they are not, where sunshine, free ventilation and healthy children are. One or all of the factors may be absent, and these simple conditions of innocent disease may be passed on, forming just the right soil for more things, as diphtheria or scarlet fever, later. The burden of the song in the little street game is the admonition forwarded to the girl who stands in the centre by her true love:

"He sent you a message to turn back your head."

And knowledge, who loves mothers best and always, goes more than half way to meet them, reiterates the wisdom of Green Basil.

And how about kisses? Are we not to kiss our own babies? No, dear mothers, not when they are very little and if you really love them. Kisses are for childhood and for all the other years of life. Children need kisses, millions of them, and thousands of hugs and pattings and pettings. But infants are too frail and tender, too easily poisoned, for such tempting demonstrations. They need an atmosphere that is calm and steady and full of perfect peace. Blue Eyes was 7 months old before her fond mother permitted herself the luxury of even the most rose leaf touch of her own lips upon the baby's soft cheek. The little hands and feet may be kissed, but not the face. And if the mother must thus deny herself it is imperative that friends and strangers be equally restrained.—Dr. Louise Fiske Bryson in New York World.

SATISFACTORY TO HIM.

An Argument Terminated Without the Defeat of Either Side.

The young man who always wears a Prince Albert coat and never seems to enjoy himself was talking to a bright young woman of this city. The bicycle was the theme of conversation.

"No," said the young man, "I do not approve of women's learning to ride the wheel."

"I don't see why."

"Because it's just a passing whim. It's a diversion which will go out of vogue just as other crazes have done. And then what have you gained by all this expenditure of time and money?"

"But I don't see, Mr. Slimmins, what reason you can have for regarding the bicycle as a mere fad."

"My reason is the disfavor toward it that is already appearing. Where everybody was once talking about its being good exercise people are coming out and denouncing it. Bicycles are being more abused every day. Don't you agree with me?"

"Of course I shouldn't think of quarreling with you, Mr. Slimmins, and I will admit one thing."

"What is that?"

"There never was a time when bicycles were sat down upon by so many people."

And the young man in the Prince Albert coat smiled a self satisfied smile and said that was exactly the point he was trying to make.—Washington Star.

Georgia enjoys the complimentary sobriquet of the Empire State of the South from the fact of its natural wealth and superior advantages in industrial and manufacturing lines.

Have I done anything for society? I have then done more for myself. Let that truth be always present to thy mind and work without cessation.—Simms.

In Holland the average rate of wages for skilled laborers of every description is from 8 cents to 10 cents an hour.

"Fluffing."

"Fluffing" is the slang, or shall we rather say technical term (it sounds so much better), for a well known effect of the mechanical influence which very long runs sometimes have on actors and actresses in the repetition night after night of their roles. Here are two amusing examples of the kind: When Miss Fanny Coleman was exciting Londoners to mirth by her excellent comedy acting as the Duchess of Berwick in "Lady Windermere's Fan," she one night added unwittingly to the humor of her performance by the following transposition of words. In the first act the duchess, who is about to confide to Lady Windermere's married son a piece of scandal in which her daughter is too young to participate, ought to say: "Agatha, darling, go and sit on the balcony and look at the sunset. The dear child is so fond of sunsets!" Whereas Miss Coleman, with unctuous gravity, rolled out the words: "Agatha, darling, go and sit on the sunset and look at the balcony. The dear child is so fond of"— Of what, indeed? But as consciousness of the situation dawned upon the actress' face the audience broke into a tumult of good humored applause.

On another occasion, when Miss Marion Terry was giving an order to a stage footman, she gently but firmly commanded him, to the intense amusement of everybody on the stage, to "carry the tent into the buns!"—London Gentlewoman.

The Value of Pure, Cold Water.

Pure, fresh cold water is one of the most valuable disinfectants, inasmuch as it is a powerful absorbent. Every sick room should have a large vessel of clear water, frequently renewed, placed near the bed, or even beneath it. This not only absorbs much of the hurtful vapor, but in its evaporation it softens and tempers the atmosphere, doing away with the dryness which is so trying and depressing to an invalid, or even to persons in health, for that matter. It has frequently been shown by actual experiment that troubled sleep and threatened insomnia are corrected by so simple a thing as the placing of an open bowl of water near the sufferer's head.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

His Experience.

An old Scotchman, on the occasion of his marriage to a young woman of 25, was rallied by some of his friends on the disparity between his age and that of his bride.

"Aweel," he responded tranquilly, "she will be near me to close my een."

"It may be," remarked an old neighbor sententiously, "but I've had twa wives, and they opened my een."—Youth's Companion.

THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 13, 1897

SECOND DAY'S SESSION

Of the American Medico-Psychological Association.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

BALTIMORE, MD., May 13.—The second day's session of the American Medico-Psychological Association in the hall of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty, 847 North Eutaw street, began this morning with a business meeting. Dr. R. M. Bucke, of London, Ont., the vice president, was elected president; Dr. Henry M. Hurd, of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, vice president; Dr. C. B. Burr, of Flint, Mich., secretary and treasurer; Drs. P. L. Murphy, of North Carolina, and S. B. Lyon, of White Plains, N. Y., auditors.

A prolonged discussion took place over minor amendments to the constitution, but all were voted down.

A vote of thanks was given Dr. Hurd for his three-year administration of the office of secretary and treasurer.

Dr. Frank C. Hoyt, of Clarinda, Iowa, read a paper on the use of hyoscine, a drug which, in the opinion of the association, is dangerous and of little worth in insanity.

Dr. R. J. Preston, of Marion, W. Va., spoke of some puzzling cases, and Dr. Ralph L. Parsons, of Greenmont, W. Va., read a paper on hospital records.

The new councillors elected to-day were Dr. Frank C. Hoyt, Clarinda, Iowa; T. J. W. Burgess, Montreal, Que.; M. B. Heyman, New York, and J. W. Brice, Tuscaloosa, Ala.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Cheatham's Nomination Will be Confirmed—Boyd Will be Appointed an Assistant Attorney General.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—A favorable report on the nomination of Cheatham, of North Carolina, as Recorder of Deeds for the District of Columbia was made to the Senate in executive session this afternoon from the District Committee. The report was unanimous and no opposition was developed in the Senate. No request was made for action at to-day's session and the nomination went to the calendar in the regular order. It is expected that Cheatham will be confirmed at the next executive session without opposition.

Solicitor of Internal Revenue Hough, of Ohio, has resigned, the resignation being tendered to the President to-day. It was supposed that National Committeeman J. E. Applications for appointments under the Treasury Department have been filed as follows: M. S. Farmer, of Flat Rock, N. C., as auditor for the War Department; W. C. Balch, of Manassas, Va., as deputy auditor for the Interior Department.

Death followed the first, and the last time eleven persons suffered, but none died. Yesterday two negro girls, Mollie Smith and Mandy White, were arrested and confessed to the poisoning. Between midnight and daylight last night, a number of neighbors took the girls in charge, and this morning their bodies were found swinging to a limb.

SENATE IN SESSION.

SUGAR TRUST INVESTIGATION RECALLED.

Resolution to Discipline Chapman, the Contumacious Witness, Introduced—Consideration of the Cuban Resolution Will Be Resumed To-day—Sundry Bills Passed.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—In the Senate to-day the sugar investigation of 1894 was recalled by the introduction of a resolution by Mr. Allen, of Nebraska, reciting the circumstances of the investigation, the refusal of Elverton R. Chapman to testify, his conviction in the courts as a contumacious witness, and the present efforts toward his pardon. The resolution proposes that Chapman be brought to the bar of the Senate to purge himself of contumacy as a prerequisite to pardon. Mr. Allen sought to secure immediate action on the resolution, but it went over on objections from Mr. Gallinger, of New Hampshire, and Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts. The latter criticised the resolution as giving away the authority of the Senate and said he would propose an amendment with a view to having Chapman punished unless he purged himself of contempt, without reference to the question of pardon. The consideration of the resolution will be in order to-morrow.

Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, made a statement relative to his resolution on Cuba. He said the committee on Foreign Relations at a meeting to-day had considered the question of referring the resolution to the committee and had not reached an agreement. The committee desired, however, that the resolution go over until soon to-morrow with a view to having a statement of facts laid before the Senate at that time. On Mr. Morgan's request the resolution went over until to-morrow.

A resolution by Mr. Butler of North Carolina, Populist, requesting the President for information relative to the sale of the Union Pacific Railroad, was presented and went over.

The Senate then took up the calendar and passed bills as follow: For the relief of certain citizens of Montana claiming the benefits of the homestead laws; granting to Montana 50,000 acres of land in aid of an asylum for the blind; appropriating $174 000 to Charles P. Chouteau for extra work on the ironclad Etlah; appropriating $15 000 for Newberry College, Newberry, S. C., for war losses.

The immigration and the kinetoscope bills were reached but went over on objection.

At 2 o'clock the Senate held an executive session and at 2 40 adjourned.

The Senate committee on foreign relations did not conclude its consideration of the Cuban resolution to-day. It will meet to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, but the sub-committee, consisting of Senators Davis, Foraker and Morgan, which to-day was given more access to the Cuban reports now held at the State Department, probably will ask for further time before submitting their ideas to the full committee. The sub-committee was unable to go through all the reports that have been received from Consul General Lee and other consuls and officers in Cuba.

At the meeting to-morrow it is possible that Senator Morgan will consent to have the resolution now pending in the Senate go over without prejudice until the committee can make its report. It is intended that all the reports of consuls shall be sent to the Senate, but the committee will select certain documents bearing on the condition of affairs in the island and on these make its recommendations and report. This report will generalize the situation without making public such matters as State Department officials and the committee think would be prejudicial to persons on the island.

Some question has arisen as to the effect the report of the committee, or the information at the State Department may have upon the resolution now pending in the Senate. Members of the committee do not express an opinion on the subject, but enough is known to justify the conclusion that instead of weakening the resolution, its friends will find cause for insisting that there is a strong reason for passing it. The object of the foreign relations committee, which has deprecated hasty action and suggested that the resolution be referred to the committee is that the Senate should not act in the premises until there is more information at hand. The opponents of the resolution have declared that the newspaper reports of the condition in Cuba are not based upon facts and are highly exaggerated. Those who have become acquainted with the reports in the State Department are of the opinion that the reports in the press have been in the main correct. One member of the committee who had listened to the summary of the reports in the department said that a very serious condition existed in Cuba and that the inquiry now being made by the committee would result in bringing to light the exact facts.

Mr. Davis says the sympathy with the struggling Cubans is as great as ever. The Republicans of the committee do not feel justified in pushing the administration until it has had time to act. It has been pointed out that only two months have elapsed since the administration came into power, and it has scarcely had time to take up and consider so important a matter as that which has been considered. The pending resolution, unlike a joint resolution, will require the executive either to approve or disapprove of it. This being the case, the Republican Senators feel that they should act in concert with the President. It is not believed that in case the Senate foreign relations committee find upon a thorough examination of the reports in the State Department that the resolution is justified, that any effort will be made to prevent its passage.

Members of the Committee on Foreign Relations feel that the question which confronts the Senate is serious, and any action that is taken by the Senate will have great weight with the administration. In case the resolution should pass both the Senate and the House there is no reason to believe that it would not be approved and that the U. S. Government would thereafter conduct itself on the lines which it lays down.

To-night the sub-committee met Secretary Sherman at the latter's house and had a long conference with him. The suggestion is advanced that the President will be inclined to wait for a report from Mr. Calhoun, who left Saturday for Havana, before making known definitely his views. Mr. Calhoun went to Cuba to investigate the cause attending the death of Dr. Ruiz, but it is believed that the President will expect him to report generally as to affairs on the island so far as his observation goes, and that Mr. Calhoun's conclusions will have some weight in determining the President's action. Assistant Secretary Day, of the State Department, was at the White House to-night and spent some time with the President.

The President has nominated Brigadier General James W. Forsyth to be Major General in the United States Army.

THE WAR SITUATION.

POWERS TRYING TO INDUCE TURKEY TO AGREE TO AN ARMISTICE.

Greek and Turkish Armies Concentrating at Domokos in Anticipation of an Engagement—Russia Peremptorily Demands of Turkey a Cessation of Hostilities—The Greek Government Discontented at the Diplomatic Situation.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 13.—The Ambassadors of the Powers held a prolonged conference to-day, at the close of which they presented to the Turkish Government a collective memorandum proposing an armistice between Turkey and Greece on the basis of the negotiations for peace now in progress through the Powers.

The memorandum, which was presented to Amad Tewfik Pasha, the Turkish Minister of Foreign Affairs, by the dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Baron de Calice, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador, enumerates the conditions which have been accepted by Greece and begs the Porte to issue the necessary orders to arrest the progress of the Turkish troops.

ATHENS May 11.—It is officially announced that the Powers have notified the Greek Government that the Greek troops may leave the island of Crete and that the admirals of the international fleet will release the steamers which have been seized during the blockade.

LONDON, May 13.—The Rome correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "I ascertained at the Italian foreign office that Turkey will certainly accede to the request for an armistice and will place herself in the hands of the Powers. The general conditions of indemnity and a strategic rectification of the frontier, upon which Turkey insists, have been already acquiesced in by the Powers. It is probable that the Powers will land additional troops in Crete."

LONDON, May 13.—The Times correspondent at Candia says: "It is feared that autonomy will fail to pacify Crete, owing to the opposition of the 20,000 Cretan Mohammedans on the island, who fear that autonomy will end in union with Greece; while the insurgents are still defiant, and actually talk of resisting the departure of the Greek troops."

The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Constantinople says the Sultan resents the mediation of the Powers and desires to negotiate with Greece directly. If this is refused the Turkish demands will be more exacting.

The Berlin correspondent of the Daily News says he learns on excellent authority that the Turkish Government demands a war indemnity of 3 000,000 pounds and the right to occupy Thessaly until it is paid.

A dispatch to the Standard from Constantinople says: In Thessaly the official reports are not favorable. A Turkish reconnoissance in force at Domokos has been repulsed, and the attack on Arta, which promised to be successful, has also resulted in a check. It is believed that Edhem Pasha is developing an outflanking movement with the right and left wings, with a view of rendering the Greek position at Domokos untenable.

The correspondent of the Times at Athens says:

"Acute anxiety is felt here because of the absence of any news from Gen. Sinolenski's column.

"Owing to the delay in arranging the armistice, the Government has addressed a strong protest to the Powers, declining to bear the responsibility should further bloodshed occur and lead to serious complications.

"As M. Ralli explains to me, the Government is in a serious predicament. In order to secure mediation it has compromised itself in the eyes of both Greeks and Cretans without obtaining a positive guarantee that Turkey will cease hostilities. Should the war be resumed the position of the Government will be most unenviable.

ATHENS, May 12.—The fact that there is no news of renewed fighting must be regarded, as good news but an uneasy feeling exists here.

The Turks are trying to outflank the Greek position at Domokos, and the delay in the Porte's reply is also interpreted to mean that Turkey does not intend to cease hostilities.

Telegrams from the front report that both armies are concentrating in anticipation of an engagement.

The city continues quiet, though it is believed that the numerous Italian volunteers and Socialists now here will endeavor to foment a revolution, leading up to a republic. But the Greeks are devoted to the monarchical idea and the worst that is likely to happen will be a change of sovereign. The return of Prince Constantine to the capital might produce disturbances, but he is likely to be discreet enough to avoid Athens for a time.

LONDON, May 13.—The Athens correspondent of the Daily Chronicle, telegraphing shortly before midnight, says: "The Government is becoming seriously discontented with the diplomatic situation and the opinion is growing that it would be better to continue the struggle than to submit to terms wounding the national honor."

"Some of the Powers favor a small indemnity, a modification of the frontier and a limitation of the Greek fleet. This would never be accepted by Greece. She possesses the right to veto the decisions of the Powers. In their original note the Powers called upon her to abandon her interests to them, but this was rejected and the word 'intrust' was substituted for 'abandon.'"

ARTA, May 13.—The Greeks under Col. Bairactaris have advanced towards Philippiadda. After sharp outpost skirmishing the Turks retired on Salopulo and the Greeks re-occupied the heights of Imaret.

LONDON, May 13.—The Athens correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says: "By the Czar's express command, Count Muravieff, the Russian Foreign Minister, has instructed M. Denelidoff, the Russian ambassador at Constantinople, to insist peremptorily upon a cessation of hostilities by Turkey.

"I also learn that Count Muravieff has decided to have an assembly elected in Crete in order to ascertain the true Cretan opinion. If the Cretans reject autonomy the entire question will be reconsidered.

"This attitude is full of hope for Crete and Greece."

HARDWARE JOBBERS.

A Large Attendance at the Convention of the Southern Association in Savannah, Ga.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

SAVANNAH, GA., May 13.—The annual convention of the Southern Hardware Jobbers Association began in this city to-day. There are about one hundred representatives of hardware firms present from all parts of the South, and quite a great number of representatives of manufacturing establishments from various cities of the country.

The sessions are held with closed doors but part of the first day was devoted to a public meeting at which the convention was organized and the president's address delivered.

After that the convention went into executive session, at which two papers were read, one by William Supple, of Philadelphia, who is president of the National Hardware Association. The subject was "What constitutes the cost of doing business?" The subject of the other paper was "Should salesmen be given the true cost?"

Both papers were discussed by the convention.

CATHOLIC KNIGHTS.

Second Day's Session of the Biennial Council—Returns Show a Total Membership in the States of Over Twenty-Three Thousand.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

MOBILE, ALA., May 13.—The second day's session of the biennial council of the Catholic Knights of America was almost entirely taken up with the reading and discussion of the report of the committee on by-laws, which was a very voluminous document and required three hours to read.

The committee on returns reported the number of members from each State and the votes to which each State is entitled in the convention, showing a total membership of 23,576 and a total vote in the council of 477, by States. This report was adopted.

The reading of the report of the committee on by-laws was by delegate Kelliher, of California, chairman of the committee. The proposed amendments to the laws of the order filled eight printed pages of the official organ. The reading of the report was concluded at the afternoon session and the whole matter referred to the committee of the whole, with Hon. D. Coleman, of Louisiana, as chairman.

A lengthy address was made by John A. Bedell, of Illinois, on the subject of the guarantee fund and the abolition of State councils.

RICE GROWERS

Rallying in Force at Washington to Prevent Legislation Inimical to Their Interest.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Representatives of the rice interests of Georgia, South Carolina and Louisiana, have invaded the Capital in full force. At the Ebbitt last night were Hon. C. C. Duson, a Republican State Senator from Southwest Louisiana; Prof. S. A. Knapp, of Lake Charles, in the same State; Locke Breaux and S. B. Daniel, of the New Orleans Rice Exchange, and Col. P. S. Lovell, President of the Crowley (Louisiana) State Bank. These gentlemen are all large rice growers. They say they were satisfied with the rice schedule of the Dingley bill as it passed the House, but are up in arms at the revised version presented by the Senate Finance Committee.

The rice growers are asking to be heard before the duty is finally fixed, and they are making a man-to-man canvas of the Senate.

A Tough Old Pie.

In former times passengers to Gloucester by the Great Western railway had to stop at Swindon long enough to lunch at the station, says London Truth. Lord Somers often went to and from Eastnor castle and often tried to have meals at Swindon, but was forced to leave off trying. There were then no refreshment contractors. In one of his halts he was given a veal pie in a turret of crust as hard as any tower at Eastnor.

He thought he had seen the pie before and in vain endeavored to cut into the pie crust wall. A merry thought came into his head. The earl had a quantity of gummed labels for curios in his pocket. He gummed one of them on the bottom of the pie and left. A fortnight later he returned, ordered the same lunch and found the label on the bottom of the turret that was set before him.

SHIELDED BY PROVIDENCE.

Two Missiles That Met In the Air and Fell Harmless to the Ground.

A half dozen or so men were sitting out in front of an uptown hotel the other evening telling stories.

"When I was 21," said a tall man, evidently from a southern state, "I had an ungovernable temper and a half brother three years older than myself. We were both church members, but that didn't seem to bring us any closer together, for he was a Methodist and I was a Baptist. You may have observed," he threw in as a decoration to the story, "that Christian charity and brotherly love don't always thrive on denominational feed. However, as I was saying, we were of different denominations, and we got along fairly well together until we began arguing on our respective faiths. Then we got hot, and I always lost my temper. I may say that he did very nearly the same, but he wasn't quite as bad as I was in that regard.

"One day we were out hunting with only one gun, a squirrel rifle, between us, and I had the gun. I may add here that we lived on a farm, and a one gun hunting party was not at all unusual. We had sat down on a rock near the edge of a stream to rest, and in some way I slipped and went into the water. It made me mad to begin with, and when he began chaffing me and telling me that a Baptist ought to be used to a little thing like that I got ten times worse and hit him a lick in the face. He ran off a few yards and picked up a bowlder about as big as your double fist, while I made a grab for the gun, which I had set up against a willow under the bank.

"Of course we did not know what we were doing by this time, only I remember telling him if he raised his hand to throw the stone I'd shoot him. He was nervy, though, and I hadn't more than got the words out of my mouth than he let the bowlder come at me, and, true to my word, I banged away at him. We weren't 40 feet apart, and it was a stand off between the bowlder and the bullet as to which was the more dangerous, but Providence, I reckon, was watching over us, for as I fired the bowlder flew into a dozen pieces, and both of us were left standing looking at each other in a dazed, helpless kind of way. Then, still not understanding what had happened, but realizing how nearly our tempers had brought us to bloodshed, we rushed into each other's arms and began crying over each other.

"When we had got over the excitement and collected our wits sufficiently to make an investigation, we discovered that by the merest chance — by providential interference, I mean—my bullet and his bowlder had met in their flight and nullified each other. On one piece of the broken stone we found the blue mark of the bullet, and in another place we found the battered bullet. He took the bullet, and I took the piece of marked stone, and we have kept them to this day as sacred souvenirs and as very potent reminders never to discuss our respective beliefs. I'm just as strong a Baptist as ever, and he is equally a Methodist, but we both believe that greater than either Baptist or Methodist is the Providence that watches over us all."—Washington Star.

A Man's Weight After Dinner.

Why does not a man weigh a pound more immediately after eating a pound of food? A little reflection will readily explain this apparent mystery. During the process of mastication, deglutition, etc., certain muscles are brought into active play, and the exercise of any muscle necessitates a temporary waste of its tissues, and a certain amount of carbon is eliminated and passed off during the course of the meal.

This loss, however, is trifling as compared with that of respiration and perspiration, both of which are increased during the various operations of making a meal. The length of time one may take to consume a pound of food makes no little difference to these losses, for if eaten leisurely there is but a slight increase of respiration or perspiration, whereas if it is hurried through both are abnormally accelerated; hence, by the time the pound is eaten, the consumer has lost appreciably in moisture or carbonic acid.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Disgusted Shah.

When the late shah of Persia was visiting England he frequently expressed his contempt for the mildness of English law. So he was finally taken to Newgate in order that he might see a gallows. He at once manifested great interest in it, and, expressing a desire to see how it worked, asked the governor to hang a man. The governor explained that he had not at the time a man ready for the experiment, whereupon the shah expressed his contempt. But he intimated that that was of no consequence. "Hang one of these," said he, pointing to his suit, each man of which probably trembled in his shoes. And very great indeed was the shah's disgust when he found that he could not prevail upon the governor to do what he wanted.—New York Tribune.

Behind a Wall Within a Wall.

The emperor of China, Kuang Hsu, cannot appear in public. He lives in a great palace surrounded by a wall. He was kept in the strictest seclusion throughout his youth, the dowager empress acting as regent. He had in his palace yard miniature models of men-of-war, a train of cars which was an exact model of the first railway train run in China, and every toy that science could invent or money procure. But he has never seen one of his own men-of-war or ridden in a real railway carriage.—New York Ledger.
